Miss. Citizens'
Council

What Every White Parent Should Know!

AS IT IS IN OKLAHOMA

Out in Oklahoma very little resistance or resentment is being shown concerning the Supreme Court decree seeking to end segregation

And this story from the Tulsa Tribune show what is taking place among youngsters in tha community:

The music was loud, the air was heavy with cigaret smoke, and the beer was flowing freely when three deputy sheriffs burst into a house at 3326 N. Harvard Ave. early Sunday.

Teen-age kids (white), parked in cars outside the place—the Dew Drop Inn, operated by a Negro—scattered in all directions in their cars and on foot when they saw the officers.

Inside, the deputies found 15 other white youngsters, two of them 14-year-old girls: the rest, boys varying from 15 to 19, and about 10 or 12 Negro adults.

All were in various stages of intoxication, some of the boys "pretty drunk."

In a back bedroom, a Negro woman lay, "passed out."

In such a setting, Deputies Ray Cryder, Leonard Coulter and C. R. Terrill learned, certain Tulsa youngsters spent their Saturday nights.

As a result of this raid, juvenile authorities, police and sheriff's deputies today began investigating the lives and backgrounds of all persons connected with the Saturday night drinking spree.

The story is typical of what is happening in many cities in the nation, and what is going to happen in much larger degree if mixing of white and Negro children is made compulsory by law.

Oklahoma, while not a Southern state, has a large number of Southern people within its borders. It is up to the latter class to take the lead and convince other citizens of the cornucopia outpouring of human ills that will inevitably follow if integration of the races becomes common.

Editorial in Jackson (Miss.) Daily News of 1-21-56

For additional copies at $5, per 100, write
Marvin Mobley, Box 45
Decatur, Ga.